A nervous old lady was riding down a dangerous looking trail with a California stage driver, when she noticed a hatchet lying in the bottom of the stage, and inquired why he carried it. "I use that hatchet to knock injured passengers in the head," replied the driver. The old lady gasped with astonishment. "We have a good many accidents on this here line," he continued, "the stage's allus tioppin' over and rollin' down precipices, and every time a passenger gits hurt he sues the company for damages. These here damage suits uses up all the profit of stagin', and we've had to stop 'em, so every driver carries a hatchet. When a passenger gits hurt we simply knock 'em on the head and throw the body over a precipice, and then there ain't no law suit. See?"
